President Georges Pompidou

Pompidou Is Dead

By Jonathan C. Randal PARIS. April 2 (WP).-President Georges Pompidou died at his private residence here tonight after a long illness. He was 62. The official Elysee Palace announcement, simply stating that Mr. Pompidou died at 9 p.m., was issued an hour after his death. No cause of death was mentioned in the statement signed by his personal physician, Dr. Jean Vigna-lou. But in recent months, Mr. Ponpidou had unofficially been reported to be suffering for mul-tiple myeloma, a cancer of the bone marrow described by medical dictionaries as fatal within six to 24 months of its onset.

The Elysee satement was released only a few hours after another official announcement that the President had been forced to cancel, "for the days to come," all official duties on account of his health.

Immediately upon the announ-cement, Alain Poher, the 64-yearold president of the Senate, was informed that he would be the interim president until the election of a new chief executive, as prescribed in the constitution. Mr. Poher served in a similar capacity

Charles de Gaulle and the elec-tion of Mr. Pompidou. Mr. Pompidou's death made official the long semi-public "war succession" among a handful The leading presidential aspiof leading politicians within the government coalition and the oprants include: position, which ranges from centrist moderates to the non-Com-munist left and the powerful Communist party. First Round

The first round of new presidential elections must be held within a period of 20 to 35 days after the incumbent's death, retirement or physical incapacity. But in light of the full field of obable candidates, a runoff ballot between the leading two vote-getters, two weeks later, is considered a certainty.

In the absence of any apparent political testament from Mr. Pompidou, the field was considered

(A Syrian military spokesman said that Syrian tanks and artillery inflicted heavy losses on Israeli forces on the Golan Heights, Renters reported from Damascus. lHe said the Syrian shelling silenced four Israeli batteries and mobile guns, started fires in areas of military concentrations and wounded or killed a number of soldiers.

Two Syrian soldiers were slightly wounded and the ex-changes of fire lasted more than eight hours, he said.

Blames Them for Election Losses

Brandt Attacks His Party's Leftists

By Craig R. Whitney BONN, April 2 (NYT).-Chancellor Willy Brandt delivered a sharp warning today to the leftwing radicals in his Social Democratic party in the wake of the three defeats that the party suffered last month in state and local elections.

Without naming the Young Socialists, a loosely organized group of 30 members of Parliament who hold strongly orthodox Marxist views, Mr. Brandt said in a party declaration:
"Whoever thinks that his duties toward the party consist of mali-cious criticism of the party and its leadership would do better to criticize from outside the party ranks." It was the closest Mr. Brandt has come to calling for

Mr. Brandt said that a 10-point declaration of party policy which he announced today was intended as guidance for the party's local councils. "They should draw the necessary conclusions," he told newsmen.

The declaration was also signed by his government's finance minister, and deputy chairman of the party. Helmut Schmidt, and the Social Democrats' leader in parliament, Herbert Wehner. A mutual friend of Mr. Wehner and Mr. Brandt said today that he saw this as a way of quieting Bonn rumors of infighting and disagreement among the

The chancellor's statement called "all hands on deck to prevent disaster." He expressly called on

In a press conference he held the party to work for a victory later to explain the statement, in the closely contested state legislature elections in Lower Saxony June 9, and said that he. Mr. Schmidt, Mr. Wehner and Heinz Kühn, governor of North Rhine - Westphalia, would all campaign there.

> Mr. Brandt's 10-point declaration and the press conference seemed intended to dispel charges that he was bored and uninterested in domestic politics, or no longer in control of the Social Democratic party.

Responsible for Setbacks

The statement also constituted good inder of what the party leadership believes to have been responsible for its setbacks in Hamburg March 3, when it lost its majority in the city legisla-ture, and in district elections in Schleswig-Holstein and Rhineland-Palatinate later last month.

"Radicalism" was the first of these. "The party is no debating club," Mr. Brandt said. "Without the center, there is no majority in a democracy. Whoever sur renders the center sacrifices his ruling position. The SPD will not allow itself to be thrown back to last century's ideas of class wariare.

He saw economic worries as the second most important problem. "To combat these," he said, "wc have to tell the voters how things are in this world, what is possible and what isn't. We have to do everything that is possible end then explain it to the voter. But in any case, the Federal Republic of Germany need not be afraid of any comparison." Mr. Schmidt is fond of noting that Germany's inflation rate of 7.5 percent last year was lower than that of any other major industrial country.

France Rebuffs EEC Partners On Links to U.S.

By David Haworth

LUXEMBOURG, April 2 (IHT).-The prospects for improvement in U.S.-Common Market relations faded here today when French opposition blocked a decision by the Nine's, invited minister or whether there should be advance consultation with the United States on major foreign-policy initiatives.

All the other European Economic Community members, led by West Germany and Britain, were in favor. But French Foreign Minister Michel Jobert argued that the community could not give the "privilege" of prior consultation to the United States because a sharp distinction had to be made between bilateral contacts between sovereign states and moves by the The EEC, he said, is not a Big Oil Strike EEC as a whole. sovereign state, but is in a process of evolution. It cannot he argued. be given an automatic mandate Gloomy Atmosphere The atmosphere of today's discussion was not improved by the mood of bitterness and disappointment over yesterday's blunt British demand to renegotiate the terms of EEC membership.

Britain's Foreign Secretary James Callaghan was able to demonstrate today for the first time the strongly pro-American line he has promised to pursue He refused to endorse further preparations for the proposed Euro-Arab conference on cultural, technical and economic cooperation-a French idea-unless they involved continual consultation with the United States.

He expressed the fear that with-out such talks there was a danger of "cutting across" Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's recent Middle East peace initiatives and also compromising decisions made during the recent energy conference of industrialized nations in Washington.

This view clashed with Mr. Jobert's, which is that only after each step that the community takes in its dialogue with the Arabs should EEC ministers decide whether there is any development worth consulting the United States about. He flatly rejected Mr. Callaghan's suggestion of reciprocal U.S.-EEC talks in advance of any community talks with the Arabs.

Arab Accord Urged Mr. Jobert said after the talks had stalled that what Europe wanted was long-term cooperation with the Arabs across a wide range of subjects. Given the nearness of Europe to the Arab world, this is essential, he said. Not all the questions involved in such a development could possi-

British Report In North Sea

LONDON, April 2 (AP. .- The British-owned Burmah Oil Co. today announced a major oll strike in the North Sea. Unofficial estimates indicated that the field could eventually supply up to a quarter of Britain's oil needs.

The company declined to say what the field's ultimate yield would be or how vast the deposits were. But on the basis of test drilling, mining experts said that production could be anything between 200,000 and 500,000 barrels a day. Britain currently uses just over two million barrels a day.

The discovery is in what is known as the Ninian field, about 110 miles east of the Shetland Islands, lying off the northeast tip of Scotland, With two previous major strikes—the Forties field of the British Petroleum Co. and the Brent field of Shell-Esso-the region could produce up to 1.2 million barrels of oil a day, experts said. He estimated that profits from North Sea oil would eventually total £3 billion a year. He also said current British taxes and rovalties would collect less than half that figure compared with between 75 and 90 percent which is taken by other countries for their oil.

Brandt Calls U.S. a Vital Part of NATO

BONN, April 2 (AP),-Chancellor Willy Brandt, on the 25th anniversary of the Atlantic Alliance, declared yesterday that "America is irreplaceable" as a defense partner for Western Europe.

"Without question there is a difference of opinion in the alliance," Mr. Brandt said in a nationally televised interview. But he cautioned against "dramatizing" the difficulties, and expressed cunfidence that political and economic disputes between the United States and Western Europe, especially France, will be resolved.

He was asked to comment on President Nixoo's recent warning that U.S. troops may be withdrawn from Europe !! NATO allies combine against America ou political and economic issues. The next national elections those for the West German fedcrai parliament and thus the chancellorship, which depends on a parliamentary majority will not take place until 1976. "The SPD has been showing wcaknesses." Mr. Brandt admitted to two television interviewers last week. But then he said he would not "pass the huck." He has been target of much criticism in the German liberal press for alleged "lack of leadership," 10 which his party's current dechne in popularity is ascribed.

The kcy test of the Social Democrats' losing streak will take place in Lower Saxony. The legislature there has been controlled by the Social Democrats since 1970 and a loss to the Christian Democrats would be taken as a major disaster for Mr. Brandt.

The possibility is a real one. for the Social Democrats have only a one-vote majority in Lower tions before the breakthrough in the synthesis of gence occurs. Prof. Dubinin, a short, halding, witty man, gave a rare interview to several Western journalists at the Institute. His huge desk was piled high with genetics hooks. journals and magazines from the Soviet Union, the United States and other countries. Large portraits of Lenin and Nikolai I. Vavliov, a ploneer in Soviet genetics in the 1920s, hung on the wall. "In the near future, we will or able to do anything with a man." the 67-year-old geneticist said.

"It is impossible to stop the progress of scleoce. That is why we should think about the social. ethical, and moral implications, whether we should change a man hiologically or not. We should show the greatest responsibility. "Our mutual relationship with nature has already shown that we can easily spoll nature, hut it is difficult for us to restore it." he continued. "If we do something wrong with a man, that can only he considered unforminghle."

Oot of the Shadow

Soviet genetics has emerged from the shadow cast hy Trofim D. Lysenko, a favorite of Stalin factors could he inherited. The theory, decided as quackish hy Western scientists, became Kremlin dogma hecause it supported the Marxist view that Communist society would succeed in molding a "new Soviet man."

Mr. Lysenko eventualiy hecame discredited and Soviets geneticists now work along the same lines as their Western colleagues.

Prof. Duhinin, who succeeded Mr. Lysenko, conceded that Soviet scientists lag hehind Americans on advanced "genetic engineer-ing," which may one day enable specialists to comhat hirth

But in many fields he said, Soviet geoeticists are "cooperating as equals' with Americans in the framework of a medical cooperation agreement.

Synthetic Genes

In the last few years, scientists in the United States and the So-viet Union have discovered how to synthesize new genes and transplant them onto cells, hut nobody has found a way to make the new genes work, Prof. Duhining Genetic engineering, he said, could have many heneficial resuits such as helping to cure hereditary disease by the replacement of defective genes with healthy ones.

The simplest example of genetic engineering, he sald, is the de-terounation of the sex of a child at conception, which he predicted would be a reality within 10 years. "I feel that in the majority of cases, parents would like to have a son," he said. "What we would have in the next generation, then, would be about 90 percent boys and 10 percent girls. That would destroy everything for man-his bases for emotion, for life, Every-thing would be destroyed."

The reverence accorded the cow by the masses of Indian society has posed a dilemma for government leaders: Should India enter a potentially lucrative export trade in beef in order to help close the critical foreignexchange gap caused by the high prices of its oil imports?

This question represents fundamental confrontation tween religious principles and economic expediency.

First Packing Plant

It was announced last week that the Kerala State govern-ment will huld the first heefprocessing plant in India's history at the village of Chalakudi, 40 miles from the port of Cochin.

The $2-million packing plant would supply beef solely for export, the announcement said. Previously, Commerce Minister D. P. Chattopadhyaya went to Knwait and reportedly discussed proposals for a beef-for-oil venture with the Arabs. The Persian Gulf states are known to have offered to set up slaughterhouses for Indian cattle and to have investigated various

the meeting of the foreign ministers of the Common Market on Monday-and it was not confined to the eight countries which received Foreign Secretary James Caliaghan's statement of what the new British Labor government required of them.

The British, too, were somewhat embarrassed because Mr. Callaghan could not be very specific about his demands; he was, in fact, importing to Luxembourg the generalities about revision of the market's terms on which his party had campaigned during the general election.

And not only has that party, now a minority government, been unable to spell out the details of its program for Eorope—it cannot he sure that it will have the backing of Parliament when Labor's points are set down. And there may have been a curious kind n; embarrassment in Washington as well as In Luxembourg as Mr. Callaghan recited the ways in which Mr. Wilson's cabinet hopes to alter the present relationship and Europe. For the foreign secretary was very kind to the United States, seeming to hint that, if matters did not go well in Labor's negotiations with the European Economic Community. Britain might have an alternative in returning to the old "special relationship" with America. Assuming that this was Mr. Callaghan's intention. It cannot be wholly welcome in Washington, Despite the recent squabbles between the United States and the market, the true American interest lies in achieving a close and compatible associa-

There was a general air of uneasiness at thon with Europe, not in splitting Europe. The relationship with Britain will always be special in intangibles, but if Britain becomes primarily the easternmost portion of an English-speaking community, rather than the weaternmost extension of Europe, there will be problems for all concerned.

But it would hardly do to view the Luxembourg session from too apocalyptic a standpoint. Mr. Callaghan, after all, was Issuing no ultimata, and his remarks about Amarica could serve just as well to bridge the Atlantic as to widen the Channel. The Six still have to adjust to become the Nine, and the new and disturbing vistas opening before all the industrialized nations in the wake of the oil embargo and the stiffening attitudes of the producers of raw materials will undoubtedly require a restudy of much that is presently incorporated in the EEC.

In this restudy, America and Canada must play their own parts, and to the extent that Britain can facilitate that, the attitude of the Wilson government can he very useful. Uncertainty, both political and economic, is the global rule today, and out of uncertainty can come embarrassing frictions. But embarrassment is only tragic for the very young and the very unsure, and the Atlantic community is not all that young, nor should It be all that nosure. Rather, it should use such episodes as Mr. Callaghan's speech in Luxembourg, like the comments of Mr. Nixon in Chicago, to increase understanding of the elements that compose this very necessary affiliation of nations.

The Kent State Indictments

*The actions of some students were violent and criminal and those of some others were dangerous, reckless and irresponsible. The indiscriminate firing of rifles into a crowd of students and the deaths that followed were unnecessary, unwarranted, and inexcusable."

1970, special report on the Kent State tragedy by the President's Commission on Campus Unrest-the so-called Scranton Commission. Like Friday's news that seven former members of the Ohio National Guard and one present member had been indicted by a federal grand jury in connection with the Kent State killings, the lines from the Scranton Commission report haul one back abruptly to another dey and time, to a particular national agony known as Vietnam. It was a war-sn experience, really-that was unique in its reach and in its capacity to produce victims. The village dead and the battlefield dead were its victims. So are American Vietnam veterans whose needs the government has been so indifferent about meeting. So, in a sense, were the four Kent State students vere shot to death in a campus uprising that followed the American action in Cambodia in the spring of 1970. And so, we would insist, are the eight young guardsmen who have now been indicted in connection with the Kent State killings.

The political and judicial aftermath of that brutal episode was hardly mora reassuring than the episode itself. The serious compassionate and judicious work of the Scranton Commission was disavowed and put down or the administration that had authorized it—put down, in fact, in the form of an attack on the commission's integrity by none other than Spiro Agnew. An FBI report casting serious doubt on the Ohlo National Guard version of what happened was not even provided to an Ohio State grand jury, which, in any event seemed illdisposed to wrestle with the facts of the

The quotation comes from the October. case at all And despite the conclusion of former Attorney General John Mitchell that the guardsmen had acted recklessly, he made a judgment-that was not wholly without supporting legal argument—that federal jurisdiction did not extend to the particular crimes of which the guardsmen had been accused. So until the case was in effect reopened by former Attorney General Richardson a few months ago, it seemed as though no final formal accounting would ever be

> It is a source of some satisfaction that this is no longer true, that the judicial process will be permitted to resolve those questions that should have been put to it long ago. But wa doubt that anyone can take particular pleasure in the plight of those eight young men who have been indicted. Whatever the trial may bring out and whatever the trial jurors may decide, certain truths will remain immutable. One is that four students were killed and cannot be brought back to life. Another is that the harassed and ill-prepared guardsmen involved in their slaying were themselves victims and casualties of an ugly circumstance which they had done little to create, If they are guilty as charged, presumably they will pay -and that is the way it should be. But this hardly seems a time for self-righteousness, let alone for vindictiveness or rejoicing. Arthur Krause, the father of one of the students killed at Kent State, put it well. upon learning of the indictments the other day. "There is no happiness in this matter."

International Opinion

Britain and the EEC

There is one broad test which the statement by Mr. Callaghan, the foreign secretary, on renegoriation of the terms of entry to the European community should be judged. Is it designed to seek agreement, to confirm Britain's membership of the community, by working from within to change and improve the community as a whole? Or is it an exercise in special pleading made from the outside which, by emphasizing British differences, actually courts a break? There is no doubt that Mr. Callaghan himself would prefer Britain to remain a member of the community... But too often Mr. Callaghan's remarks give the impression, intentionally or not, of someone standing outside the community, looking in like a man from Mars inspecting at a remote distance the strange goings-on on earth. Yet it is our community and we are inside it...

other eight foreign ministers of the Common Market with all the apparent finesse of a protesting Breton farmer driving a herd of cows up the Champs-Elysées.

-From the Daily Mail (London). * * *

Britain asked for all the advantages and none of the inconveniences, all the profits but none of the sacrifices. Prime Minister Harold Wilson is using renegotiation of British entry to the market as a political ploy to win a solid majority in the British Parliament. Whether one considers Mr. Callaghan's statement as a derisory ultimatum, or as the first act of an inadmissible blackmail, is no longer very important in relation to the immense disappointment inflicted on the real friends of Britain and the most fervent partisans of Europe.

> -From l'Aurore (Paris). * * *

A threatening ultimatum from London was given to the EEC. By radically "renationalizing" its foreign poilcy, the Labor government has started a backward chain reaction which may lead fairly quickly to the early death of the European construction.

Impeachment Threat and Détente: An Assessment

By Murrey Marder

WASHINGTON.—The Nixon administration misjudged Sorlet readiness to move quickly toward a nuclear accord in Moscow last week, U.S. officials concede, as they sort out the con-sequences of those presummit

As a result, American officials insist, the administration is engaged in more than a self-serving public relations exercise to save the June summit trip to Moscow by President Nixon, by denying that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's mission was "2 failure."

Because of the American miscalculations about what would happen in Moscow last week, for which U.S. officials partly blame both sides a basic question remains about American-Soviet relations

Still Unanswered

It is the same overriding question that Kissinger carried into his talks with Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev, and which was unanswered as far as the United States is concerned when Kissinger left Moscow:

Will the Kremlin seek to advaoce, stall or exploit U.S.-Soviet detente one-sidedly this summer, while an impeachment threat hangs over Nixon?

In retrospect, U.S. pianners acknowledge that they misjudged the possibilities, or the likelihood, that the Soviet Union, in a mere three days of talks, would risk making a profound, rushed declsion on control of nuclear weapons-especially on an American formula.

Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin had been given the U.S. proposal only a few days earlier by Kissinger in Washington, for limiting multiple, in-dependently targetable re-entry vehicles, clusters of nuclear warheads known as MIRVs. But there was no counter proposal from the Soviet side.

Kissinger construed Dobrynin's highly interested and optimistic reaction as a very positive sign, U.S. officials ruefully said after-

High Optimism

On the Air Force jetliner headed for Moscow and the talks, Kissinger talked further in private with Dobrynin. In chatting with newsmen on the plane afterward, Dobrynic, while avoiding any specifics, reflected high optimism about the impending Moscow

Ambassadorial ontimism however, is never a solid guarantee of the atritude of principals, even though the Kissinger-Dobrynin relationship Is extraordinarily close.

Kissinger, as it turns out, also may have been in an exceptionalreceptive mood for optimism. After an unparalleled six months of globe-circling crisis diplomacy, was secretly planning a nondiplomatic venture right after the Moscow talks his own wedding.

The presence of Dobrynin aboard Kissinger's plane was not unprecedented; this was the ourth time they have traveled together to Moscow. But every earlier trip began secretly. This time. American newsmen were aboard, as they have been since Kirsinger has been secretary of state with the exception of Kissinger-Dobrynin trip to Moscow in October, during the Arab-Israeli warı.

The traveling press provides a high-intensity spotlight on Kis-singer's activities. This not only enhances the Kissinger image of diplomatic superman, it also supplies what has become an essential ingredient for Kissinger's strategic style: a display of dynamism constant momentum, a bandwagen to join-or miss.

However, the press spotlight, as the Moscow trip showed works both ways; it can illuminate setbacks as well as successes. In the cars before going to Moscow, Kissinger, privately and poblicly, portraved mixed expectations about what the mission might produce, emphasizing the obstacles.

This teo is an important ingredient in diplomacy. The public balance aneet on a diplomatic mission is often measured against the advance hopes or doubts ex-pressed about it. Kissinger is usually highly artful in this level of public diplomacy, normally ojecting moderate expectations with the hope of surpassing them. On his arrival in Moscow on March 24, however, Kissinger departed from his usual cautious pproach. Partly because of Dobrynin's optimism, it is claimed, but also to avoid being cast as the obstructive bargainer, Kissinger said he expected that "we will make concrete progress on a number of outstanding issues." The most outstanding issua was the hope Kissinger had been expressing for weeks: to achieve "a conceptual breakthrough" on the extremely complex question of controlling multiple nuclear war-

Failure

Looking back on the failure to achieve that breakthrough, U.S. strategists admit that the hopes were probably bound to be illfounded, perhaps regardless of Soviet ulterlor motives.

"You couldn't have had a hreakthrough unless both sides could have approached it from exactly the same point of view," one U.S. official said.

That never has been the case in previous U.S.-Soviet negotiations. Now, in addition, the Soviet perception is bound to be in-fluenced by the Kremlin's assessment of what is happening on the confusing American scene. matter how Soviet strategists evaluate the prospects of presidential impeachment, they cannot be absolutely certain what is

If Kissinger had been on one of his normally secretive trips to Moscow, he could have characterized the outcome almost any way he wished, because details of nuclear negotiations are highly This time, however, ha was impaled by his public optimism and the inability to match

Gen. Eisenhower

The trouble with NATO-and

By normal diplomatic standards, U.S. officials insist, what resulted was about par for the course or even a bit better. The Soviet Union presented a counter proposal in Moscow. The issue was joined, diplomatically speaking, but with the two sides so far apart that it was impossible to bargain in Moscow without exhaustiva examination and debate

There are fundamental differences in the nuclear arsenals of the two sides.

In the temporary, five-year accord on limitation of nuclear weapons, signed in Moscow at the first U.S.-Soviet summit in 1972, the Russians gained a numerical advantage in the ceiling placed on intercontinental missile launchers: 2.259 for the Soviet Union to 1,710 for the United States.

This lead was offset by the American superiority in nuclear bomb-carrying aircraft, 496 to 140, and, most importantly, in the American lead in multiple warheads. The Soviet Union, at that point, had no MIRVs; the United States had thousands of them being placed on its long-range

By mid-1974, Secretary of De-fense James Schlesinger disclosed recently, the U.S. total of nuclear weapons deliverable by air, sea and land was 7,940 weapons compared to 2,600 for the Soviet Union.

The United States plans to have about 10,000 MIRVs on its 1,710 missiles by the time the temporary five-year offensiva weapons pact runs out in 1977. behind, but its high prospects ara in future years for equalling or surpassing the American warhead levels, unless there is a limiting, permanent accord.

This is the core of the present arms control challenge. In the past year, the Soviet Union has tested four new intercontinental ballistic missiles, listed by the United States as SS-X-16, SS-X-17, 88-X-18 and 85-X-19.

Three of these four new ICBMS, Schlesinger has said, "have been flown with MIRVs" now. If fully armed, said Schlesinger, these ne ICBMs alone would have sufficient "throw weight" to give the Russians 7,000 one-megaton to two-megaton nuclear warheads.

In Moscow, the U.S. proposal employed a formula based on throw weight-the lifting capacity of missile launchers—as a basis for limiting nuclear weapons on both sides.

The Soviet Union is superior in throw weight, with larger, and more numerous, intercontinental missiles than the United States. The United States is superior at present in numbers of warheads, with its MIRV advantage, and it is also superior in other forms of missile sophistication.

The Soviet Union, in Moscow, counterproposed an arms limitation based on numbers rather than throw weight, to counter the current U.S. advantage.

This means the two sides are approaching the control problem from different directions.

The Soviet approach, U.S. experts say, also raises major ques-tions about verifying tha weapons on each side because it is far easier by satellite or other surveillance methods to assess the throw weight of an adversary's missile than it is to detect how many MIRV warheads are clustered on it.

Achieving a compromised solution, experts say, is conceivabledepending on the will of both aides. This is the key unknown quantity, added to the uncertaintles of impeachment, that

Ronald Reagan, who spoke at dinner, not only shared Rocke-feller's interest in backing the President as a barrier to the Vice-President, he also had to prove to the Republican regulars that he was not just a rightwing Californian kook. Resgan advanced toward that latter goal by being elaborately kind to the press and issuing a speech draft with such serious-sounding sub-titles as: "philosophies," "the issues," "inflation and large."

Mysterious 'Night Porter' Blunders Round Meaning

By Thomas Quinn Curriss

DARIS, April 2 (THT).—Though "The Night Porter" (at the Elysec Lincoln and the Publicle Matignon in English) fails as a thriller, it is mysterious enough. What it is supposed to be about is never clear. One is reminded of Pope's line, "Means not, but blunders round

Some German war criminals, having escaped justice, hold meetings in Vienna during which they examine genocide charges against them and plot to murder surviving witnesses, Dirk Bogarde is a psychopathic 65 officer who after the fall of the Third Reich goes underground as a Viennese hotel clerk—a situation that de-mands a liberal stretch of the imagination.

One day in 1957, a woman he has tortured in a concentration camp shows up as a guest at the hotel. Now the wife of an orchestra conductor, she sees her former termenter and cannot resist him. She leaves her husband and resumes her degrading relationship with the Nazi. His companions, fearing she may betray them, are intent on murdering her. What Italian director-author

Liliana Cavani had in mind is impossible to decipher. Her protagonist is a mad andist without a trace of conscience; her "her-oine" seems a complacent slut, a singularly weak-willed moron. Nor does there appear to be a political message or warning. Do these Nazis plan a comeback? Are they trying to save their hides? As for the love interest, it is a case history out of Kraft-Ebbing, arousing no sympathy for either man or woman,

Though some of the footage was shot in Vienna, such little use is made of the background that the action might as well be taking place in Brixton. This impression is reinforced by casting British players in the leading roles and dubbing everyone else into English-with accents ranging from BBC to Cockney with a labored stress on evasive Hs, To crown the catastrophe, there is an eerie interlude in which Charlotte Rampling, bare-breasted but wearing men's trousers and suspenders, sings a doleful song in a flashback to a concentration camp cabaret, "The Night Porter" is rich in grotesque unreality but its petty pace deadens any sense of suspense.

Operatic 'Dorian Gray' Makes Debut AMSTERDAM:

By David Stevens

CCHEVENINGEN, the Nether-B. (1111) short novel "The Picture of Dorian Gray" reappears now and then in a new guise, the latest being an "English" opera by a Dutch composer that has just been given its world premiere here by the Netherlands Opera.

An English opera at least in the sense that the libretto is in English, adroitly drawn from the novel by the 44-year-old composer, Hans Kox, who seems to be a prolific composer in many forms, although this is his first opera. He also is scheduled to become artistic director of the Concertgebouw Orchestra in the

His libretto reads very well, rather like a play by Wilde, since it consists mainly of the witty and cynical repartee that makes up much of the novel. The narrative part of the book finds its way into the construction of the libretto, into two acts of six scenes each, with each self-con-tained scene concentrating on a porticular stage in the novel's development, of Dorian Gray's descent into corruption and its progressive reflection in the

Problems

But when a libretto is as faithful to its model as this '-, the problems of the original come home to roost. For all its references to decadence and corruption and for all its violent scenes, "Dorian Gray" is a book of ideas more than of action or characters. A lot has to be taken on faith, including Dorian Gray's depravity. Basil Hallward'e ar-tistic talent, or Sybil Vane's thes-pian abilities or lack thereof.

The result was that Lord Henry Wotton became here the most interesting character; more real because his reason for existing to utter Wilde's brittle epigrams and paradoxes-was there to be heard and was effectively put over in the strong and elegant performance of the American tenor Timothy Nolen. Even here, Kox's traditionally serviceable but ecleetic score did not help much, for it slowed down lines that beg to trip off the tongue with almost Rossinian lightness, and elsewhere did not really supply the necessary musical clothing for the principal characters or a consistent atmosphere. The musical language ranged from Schumann's "Vogel als Prophet" being played on the piano by Dorian Gray as the curtain goes up, to a scene with-

"Killdeer," Jay Broad's new play at the Public Theater, typi-fies, says Clive Barnes, "the slick mediocrity that has given the Broadway theater a bad name." The ides of the play is not a bad one, says Barnes. 'It tells of the death of a salesman ... a man on the edge of a crack-up." While the play probably wouldn't be a total disaster as an hour-and-ahalf special on television, "I am surprised that it should be thought worth spending public money on producing it." "The Sugarland Express," directed by Steven Spielberg, concerns a couple "as American as poptops or the Grand Canyon," says Nora Sayre. She writes: "Both wife and husband (Goldie Hawn and William Atherton) have done time in Texas for petty larceny; she bullies him into a jailbreak because their small son has been put up for adoption by the child welfare board. Frantically resolved to retrieve the baby, they hijack a highway patrol car, and hold the patrolman as their hostage and chauffeur throughout several hundred miles ... The wife soars on their celebrity, queening it over the little kingdom of their car. But a police stake-out awaits them at their destination, and the husband is shot." "Conrack," a movie based on Pat Conroy's "The Water Is Wide," is "worth welcoming for its intentions," says Nora Sayre. Martin Ritt directs. "Set in 1969. the movie details the experiences of a young teacher (Jon Voight), who takes on the fifth through eighth grades in a black school on an island off the coast of South Carolina," says Sayre, "The plcture revives the hopes and frustrations of the 1960s, including the idea that deprived people may be nourished by education... German Trade Surplus Hits Record

By James C. Furlong BONN, April 2 (AP-DJ) -A steep and not fully explained drop in imports sent West Germany's trade surplus for February soaring to a record 5.074 billion deutsche marks

The figure was sharply higher than January's 3.572-billon-DM surplus and the previous record of 3.964 billion DM set in October, Imports dropped 114 percent to 12,362 billion DM in February from 13.946 billion DM in January, according to figures announced today by the Federal Statistics Office in Wiesbaden, The much smaller import bill more than compensated for a slight 0.5 percent dip in export receipts, to 17.437 billion DM from 27.518 billion DM.

The February, 1974, surplus was more than two and a half times larger than the simples of 194 hillion DM a year earlier, when exports totaled 13.742 billion DM and imports 11.802 billion DM. The February current account, comprising merchandise trade and invisible trade (tourism, insurance, transfer payments, etc., posted a record surplus of 3.5 hillion DM in February, np from 1.4 billion DM in January and 700 million DM a year earlier.

The merchandise trade surplus. which is the figure most closely watched by the foreign exchange market, was somewhat larger than the 4.7-billion-DM surplus predicted by official sources last

As a result, the dollar eased on the foreign exchange market, closing at 2,533 DM against 2,548 at the finish yesterday. In the absence of definitive official explanations, there were conflicting unofficial and semi-official attempts to clarify the sharp drop in imports. One economist attributed the decline to a continuation of the trend toward slower economic growth that was evident in the second half of 1973, when real gross national product showed a year-toyear rise of only 4.5 percent.

is officially Citicorp.

Our official name has been First National City Corporation, but "Citicorp" caught on as a kind of nickname. Citicorp—it was easy to say and easy to remember.

So, to make things simple, we changed our legal name to Citicorp. Everything else will stay the same. Especially, our commitment to more and better financial services for everyone. So, from now on, just say Citicorp.

Fewer responses but...

Executive recruitment advertisements in the International Herale Tribune will not bring you 160-150 curriculum vitae, as in a national daily newspaper... they bring in normally newspaper... between 15 and 30 responses.

Over the past two years, however, they provided an average of 5 to 6 candidates who were qualified to hold the job., the critical statistic!

The International Herald Tribune asked personnel directors and management consultants to evaluate each of their recruiment advertisements in terms of responses, mainter of qualified condidates and advertising investment. We have assembled this information, job by job, category by eategory, in our Cost-Per-Candidate Report'.

The 'Cost-Per-Candidate Report' will be maked to any interested recruitment executive (please mention title company's name), free of charge by writing to:

FOUR REFORMS A Guide for the Secenties

By William F. Buckley ir. Putnam., 128 pp. 34.35.

Reviewed by Leonard Silk

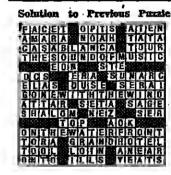

Buckley jr. asks to be taken not as an ideologist of the right but as a serious social reformer. To be sure, he has not shifted an inch to the left. He believes as fervently as ever that the democratic political process is full of hazard for human freedom and grandeur, since it per-mits the undistinguished many to outvote the few with brains and wealth. He sees the market-place as the sacred turf of in-dividualism, and he seeks to guard the market's walls against the surrounding hordes of liberals and socialists.

He inveighs against them with great verve and a kind of Ciceronian poetry. Like that Clifford Odets character in "Awake and Sing!" who said, "She's beautiful like French wolds!" Mr. Buckley loves Latinate English words (e.g., detritus, exiguous, etiolated) and be often uses them with startling accuracy: "But consider now the anfractuosity of tax policy..." whose windings and turnings I was contemplating only recently, alone with my Bowmar calculator and my long

At a time when his eminent brother, Sen. James Buckley of New York, has called for President Nixon to resign as a noble but heartbreaking act for the good of the presidency and the conservative cause, William Buckley's book, written before that unkindest cut, somewhat postalgically reminds us how staunchly the Buckley's defended the Nixonian canon—and what a contribution they made to it. For "Pour Reforms" is pro-law-and-order, anti-busing, pro-corpora-tions, anti-big-government spending, pro-sid-to-Catholic-or - other private education, anti-centralization of power or at least spending in Washington, pro-diffusion to the states and localities—in brief, the heart and soul of the New American Revolution and the New Federalism.

However—and this is Nixonian, too—Mr. Buckley does not come forth as simply a nay-sayer or defender of the status quo. He does offer basic reforms, as well as marginal gimmicks, to serve his philosophy, a blend of libertarian economics and social élitism. He also seems to me to serve the interests of his class, which Marxists would define as the upper bourgeoisie, but which Mr. Buckley would define as no class at all except as the envious mob limit and revile the rich as

What are his four reforms? The first is "Coogress shall appropriate funds for social welfare only for the benefit of those is below the national average." He contends that the essential

TN this small book, William F. purpose of social-welfare legisle. tion should be "redistributionist" -to take from those states with more to give to those with lead but notes with amused horror that a few of the richest states receive more from the other receive more from one other states than they pay back to them via the federal government. For instance, New York, the richest state, gets $1 back for every 98 cents it pays to Washington.

But this seems insane only if you ignore, as Mr. Buckley does, that some states especially New York—have serious social prob-lems that are not entirely of their own making and are national in origin, such as the heavy migration of poor people from the South and from Puerto Rico.

Mr. Buckley's second reform would be a complete overhaul of the federal tax system—to eliminate the progressive feature of the income tax, eliminate all de-ductions except those that relate directly to the cost of acquiring income, eliminate all exemptions eliminate the corporation tax and reimburse taxpayers below the poverty line for any federal taxes that are regressive in impact.

This proposal cannot be shaken off as foolish. Mr. Buckley's key proposal for a uniform tax of 15 percent on all income, first made by Prof. Milton Friedman of Chicago a decade ago, could yield about as much as the present m-come tax, if one abolished all the deductions and exemptions that have so eroded the tax base, But Mr. Buckley is wrong in suggesting that this would provide no particular after-tax gains for rich people, who have learned how to get around progressive tax rates very nicely already. Calculations by Joseph Pechman and Benjamin Okner of the Brookings Institution demonstrate that people with annual incomes of $1 million or more pay an average of 32 percent in federal income taxes; for them a cut to a flat rate of 15 percent would be one gorgeous bonanza. Indeed, for those earning $100,000 to $1 million, the average ta; collected by the government is 30 percent. Nevertheless, Mr. Buckley is on the right traci. and there certainly should be a major cleaning out of exemption and deductions and a major scaling down of personal-incomes tax rates.

Mr. Buckley's two other reforms call for (a) amending the Constitution to permit public aid to nonpublic schools, and (b) fighting crime by repeal of the Piftit Amendment against self-incrimination (as now defined) and by criterion, "Did he do it?" and to the goal of "speedler justice.". I vote no on both of these but refrain from superficial comment. It would be unfair—and mgrateful - to try to reduce Mr. Buckley to the sum of his proposals. He is a man of great wit and high style, like that neo-Socialist rhetorician, his antagonist and friend John Kenneth Galbraith. "Hypocrite lecteur— mon semblable—mon frère!"

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott

MOLE.

A translated version of one of the world's greatest bridge books, "Bridge a La Une" by José Le Dentu, has been published by Harper and Row. Its English title is "Championship Bridge."

Le Dentu covers the history of international bridge and its most spectacular deals.

In one of the deals from the book, shown in the diagram, the author recalls a masterly effort in the 1965 world championship by the late Ivan Erdos, who was South. Once the heart fit was established and North had shown tablished and North had shown a strong hand with a jump rebid, South used an asking bid in spades. The response of four clubs showed second-round spade control, and South then used Blackwood before settling in six Erdos faced the problem of avoiding the loss of two spades. The obvious play was to finesse in diamonds, a 50 percent play that was destined to lose. Erdos's line of play, against which there was no defense, seemed like clairvoyance to the spectators but it was based on sound reason-

The opening club lead was won with the king in dummy, and trumps were drawn. A club was led to the ace, and the club loser was ruffed in the dummy. When East discarded a diamond, it was clear that the diamond finesse was likely to lose: East was known to have begun with doubletons in hearts and clubs, so he was marked with diamond length, probably including the king. Erdos saw that he could make the slam if East held both the diamond king and the spade ace. He therefore led a low spada from dummy and won with the queen when East rightly ducked. The club queen and two more trump leads left South with the five of hearts, the eight of dis-monds and the 9-1 of spaces. Dummy showed the K-2 of spaces. and A-Q of diamonds.

The last trump was led, and a spade was thrown from dummy. As South had foreseen, East was now helpless. If he had routinely now helpless. If he had routined discarded the spade ten, South would have played a spade, for-ing a lead from the diamond king at the 12th trick. East saw through South's plan and did the best he could by discarding the diamond ten.

If East had been a week player, South might have for wrong and played a spade. But South knew that East was good enough to unguard his diamend king. It was also rather more likely that East had started with six diamonds rather than seven. So Erdos led to the diamond ace and dropped the king to make

Women Jockeys Make Up for Lost Time in England

Sweep Ist Race Against Men

LONDON, April 2-Women rode into the world of English horse racing with a flourishand vengeance-today. In the first riding competition between males and females here, the former weaker sex finished one, two and three

The historical event happened at Nottingham, in central England, where seven male jockeys rode against 15 girls in the mile and a half Lads and Lassies Handicap.

Most of the females began putting on their makeup 20 minutes before the race, lining up at mirrors placed in an ambulance room they used as their jockey quarters.

When the race ended blonde Linds Goodwell, 24, crossed the finish line first on 4 to 1 shot Pee-Mai, Cicely Stevens, on 33 to 1 shot Snodland, was second, and Jacky Thome, on 14 to 1 Beaming Lee, completed the sweep. .

One male jockey commented later, "We never had a chance."

That was exactly how the women felt—before today.

ALL SMILES-Linda Goodwell and the handlers of her mount, Pee-Mai, are happy after the female juckey won the first race in England with male and female riders.

Six Players to Open Season Without Contracts

By Ross Newhan

PHOENIX, Aria, April 2.— Dodger relief pitcher Mike Marshall is one of six major leaguers expected to enter the 1974 season

It is not unprecedented for a player to start the season without a contract but none has played an entire year without one.
It has been "theorized" that, were a player to do so, ha would become a free agent and eligibla to negotiate with any of the 24 teams. But the theory has never been tested.

Besides Marshall, players unsigned for this season—which opens Thursday-are Bobby Tolan and Dave Roberts of San Diego, Doyle Alexander and Boh Revnolds of Baltimore, and Sparky Lyle of the New York Yankees . Each player is tied to his team by the renewal clause in his 1973 contract, a provision similar to the option clause in National. Basketball Association and National Football League contracts. A player signing for the current season, for instance, is committed

Marshall, traded by the Montreal Expos last year, says that his contract was inherited by tha Dodgers, who offered him a raise to $87,500, which Marshall agreed

But because he had not signed by March 10, the Dodgers notifled him that the renewal clause was in effect, in addition to his new salary.

Italy May Experience Age Problems

By Brian Glanville

LONDON, April 2 (IHT: -As the World Cup draws ever nearer, certain interesting themes and patterns begin to emerge. There is the sudden rise of Yugoslavia as one of the strongest challengers. There is the dramatic appointment of their new manager, Miljan Miljanic, and that of the Dutch chief, Rings Michels. There is the preponderance-or at least the multiplicity-of veteran players. Deyna, the Polish international forward who recently played in Florence for his country against Fiorentina, announced that Italy wonldn't win the World Cup because they had too many veterans.

"It would be very sad for Video Techniques to think they had the inside track on another promotion with me," Foreman said. "No matter what happened over here, if the agreement and contract I made with them isn't honored, I guess I'll spend the rest of my life in court.

This is in contrast to most critics, career as player, secretary and ager wun k who believe that the Itali among the favorites. After all, any team that hasn't given a goal away for 1,007 minutes will take some beating, to say the least, And then, there is always Riva.

Gigi Riva, the player who would have changed hands for the equivalent of a million and a half sterling last summer had Cagliari accepted Juventus' offer, missed the Italian match against West Germany because of an injury. He was badly missed. Though this will be his second World Cup. and though he was already an international when the 1966 cup was played-without him-he is still only 29.

But Dino Zoff, that immaculate goalkeeper, is now 32. Gianni Rivera, the golden boy who played in the First Division at 15 and was transferred to Milan at 16, will be 31 in August. His eternal rival and colleague Sandrino Mazzola, from the other Milanese club. Internationale, is 32. Tarcisio Burgnich, the sweeper-wbo played so well at Wembley this season but was a standby in Rome for the German game-is 34. There is a somewhat wheathered look about this Italian team, but the surprising emergence of big Giorgio Chinaglia of Lazio as his country's most effective centerforward has given an interesting new look, and bite, to the attack. Moreover. Chinagila is a great friend of Riva, with whom he always combines very sweetly. No. I don't think Italy is too old.

And Brazil? Well, Felix, that uncertain goalkeeper so surprisingly called back, is 36 now. Carlos Alberto, also recalled, is well into his thirties. Ademir Da Guta, the new man, is 31. Sweden, whose elderly team impressively got to the Final in 1953, have three midfield men who will celebrate a birtbday next May. Grahn will be 30. Bo Larsson and Kindvall, 31. Up front, however, is the menacing and still very young pair of Edstroem and Sandberg. The Dutch team, which will be so much more dangerous and determined when Michels, once Ajax's manager (and now Barcelona'a) has them under his wing. is a nice blend of youth and experience. Piet Keizer, the rather moody left winger, is more than 30, but most of the experienced players, such as the great Johan

Cruyff, are in their late twentles. Miljan Miljanic, the Red Star coach, takes over a Red Star team in which, again, the older players —Dzajic, Oblak, Katalinski—are only in their late twenties. Most of them, incidentally, will be hoping to move to the lusher pastures of Western Europe when hostil-

Defections Spur Action in the NFL

By William N. Wallace

NEW YORK, April 2 (NYT) .-The fallout from the signing of the Miaml Dolphin stars Larry Ctonka, Paul Warfield and Jim Kilck, by the World Football League was considerable yesterday. Don Shula, the Dolphin coach, started calling his 14 unsigned players.

Joe Robbie, the chief executive officer, said he was certain to aue someone for comething. Other national Football League players chronely applauded the move while there was fear that the Toronto Northmen of the WFL, the Coonka-Warfield-Kiick team beginning in 1975, would destroy the Canadian Football League. Shula, who said he was "shocked." indicated he would get right after signing the Dolphins who have not yet agreed to new contract terms before his championship team melts away. One player, Jim Mandich, the tight end, could become a free agent as early as

As for Csonka, Warfield and Kirck returning for a lame duck campaign. Shula said, "I don't know how these players will perform. It's a situation we've never faced before and we'll play it by

We will be involved in litigation in one place or the other." said Robbie, a former practicing attorney. His chief targets are John Bassett jr. of the Toronto Northmen and Edward Keating, the agent for the three players.

No Secrets in WFL Robbie said he felt Keating had the players signed up with Bassett as early as last Thursday, a view with which E. Joseph Wheeler of the Washington Ambassadors of the WFL agreed.

Wheeler said the other 11 WFL clubs were informed that Torouto had the three locked un. "We don't give each other shocks in the WFL," said Wheeler. Mandich said, "The Dolphins took in $12 million last year on TV rights, ticket sales and every-thing. Of that, the players realized 51 million in salarles, a ratio of 12 to 1. Who is being disloyal to whom?" In Chicago, the executive direcfor of the NFL Players Association. Ed Garrey, said, "Now the WFL can do what the NFL never could do . . . Destroy the Canadian Football League," This opinwas shared by Jake Gaudeur, the CFL commissioner, Gaudeur said 1 lat the WFL's presence in Canada threatened to "overwhelm us with affluence." Legislation will be introduced this month by the federal government in Canada's Parliament seeking to outlaw the Northmen from playing in Canada, Gaudeur sald the signing of the three players "would seem to prove the government's concern is valid."

The CPL governors persuaded

Bassett and his father to sell their major interest in the To-conflict of interest. The sale was completed recently, the Bassetts getting more than $3 million '.r the franchise, a record CFL Garvey does not look fond-ly upon the WFL because its existence takes the teeth out of the anti-trust suit the Players Association has filed against the NPL, charging monopolistic practices.

Little, the Dolphin LATTY guard, said he was glad for his No. 6 contender.

I'm not going up there with them." Another Dolphin, Tim Foley, said they would be missed but "you don't build a team around three people. The way our line blocks there are several runners who can do real well behind it." One more Delphin, Manny Pernaudcz had a date to negotiate with the Portland WFL club, The Storm. Alan Page, the allpro delensive tackle of the Minnesota Vikinga, will also be talking to The Storm. "I'd be foolish not to listen." said Page. "You certainly can't knock Warfield Cronka and Kuck for what they did." Lee Roy Jordan of the Dadas Cowboys said the signing would get the owners out earlier to sign the players. They usually wait until halfway through summer camp," he said. Joe Moore of the Chicago Bears sald the signings indicated "there was genuine money over in the WFL. The Birmingham team of the WPL said it would scon announce a majr signing of an NFL play-

Not everyone was jumping. Two quarterbacks of the Philadelphia Eagles, John Reaves and Rick Arrington, said they had spurned WFL offers and would sign with the Eagles again. Weeb Ewbank of the Jots posed one unanswered question about the new league. He said, "How long can they stay in business shelling out that kind of money?

Raiders' Stabler to Join WFL

NEW YORK, April 2 (UPI).— Ken Stabler, who kelped lead the Oakland Raiders to the NFL's Western Division championship. today signed a multi-year contract with the Birmingham Antericans of the World Football League, becoming the fourth "name player" to jump to the new league in 72 hours.

Stabler, with the raiders four years, has another year to go on his Raider contract as well as an option year immediately after that, so he will not report to Birmingham until 1976.

On Sunday, Larry Csonka, Jun Krick and Paul Warfield of Mami all signed with To-ronto of the WFL in a $3.5-million package covering three years. They'll start play in the WFL in 1975.

A Chinese Bottle

ONDON, April 2 (IHT).—An antique Chinese bottle was sold today for £420,000-just over $1 million-at Sotheby's in

The auctioneers said that it was a world record price for any work of art other than a painting.

Although the price seemed extraordinary, one expert pointed out that the bottle is an exceptional piece, "probably the finest blue and white" to come on the market in 20 years, and the "finest type" of Ming porcelain.

The 16-inch-high bottle, dating from about AD 1400 (early Ming period) was put up for sale anonymously. The buyer was a London dealer in Oriental antiquities, Helen Glatz, who often buys on commission. Experts say that only three other bottles of the type are still known to exist. One is in the national museum in Taiwan; another in Iran, and the third, in Holland.

The bottle has a picture of a dragon among foliage and trees. The previous record for an objet d'art was $523,000 paid in London in 1972 for a Chinese wine jar, Sotheby's said.

Country Music Gets Hearing in U.S.S.R.

By Christopher S. Wren MOSCOW INTTI.—Streetcars rattled outside the Palace of Culture of the Railway Workers' Institute in Moscow, but inside the sound was strictly Nashville —songs of love forlorn and good men gone wrong, of fast-rolling diesel trucks and jambalaya, crawfish pie and a file gumbo. U.S. country music had hit the Soviet Union at last, in the lanky person of George Hamilton 4th, a North Carolina-born singer well known in Nashville and other points, but not yet in Moscow.

Hamilton, for 13 years a regular with Nashville's Grand Ole Opry, bad been invited by the U.S. Embassy to spend several days explaining country music to a few selected Soviet audiences. People Music

"Maybe people music is a better word." Hamilton said in an Appalachian twang that some-times challenged his Soviet Interpreters. "It's music of the plain people, the working people." Hamilton illustrated what be nicant by flat-picking his guitar or hy playing a tape recording of several old country music classics. His audiences followed his literate commentary with Russian-language scripts. They were delighted by his singing but puzzled by the references to "boedown," "jamboree." "hilibilly" and "bluegrass." all of which defy translation into Russian.

The description of his own earlier hit, "Break My Mind." as "a nitty-gritty, uptight, folkcountry, psychedelic love ballad,"

A Tape Hamilton offered one taped song from the 1920s by a then-popular group called Gid Tanner and the Skillet Lickers. 'Do you know what a skillet is?" Hamilton asked aud drew ooly silence. "Tt's a frying pan," he explained. "These people were very earthy and they cleaned their skillets by licking them after they had finished eating." Any confusion could not be blamed upon Hamilton, a smooth performer who was so conscientious in his explanations that, after three lectures, he had to soothe his throat with bot Russian tea before he could sing.

U.S. country music, though it bears a resemblance to some Russian folk music, is virtually unknown here. It is seldom played by the Voice of America. Western records circulating among Soviet youth are almost exclusively confined to rock music.

Recognition When Hamilton in one lecture described some country music greats from the Carter family and Jimmy Rodgers to Hank Williams and Johnny Cash, only the last elicited a flicker of recognition. "Da, Dzhonny Kesh," cooed a young blonde. "Dzhonny Kesh." Nonetheless, the 37-year-old Hamilton was thoroughly at home when he spent one evening jamming with several intent young Russian guitarists, who quickly grasped the simple chords if not all the lyrics of his songs. After one of his performances, a young man with a pick-up rock group in Moscow came shyly forward to tell Hamilton that he wanted his group now to start playing some country songs.

Prague Concerts

Hamilton, who started singing in 1956 as a University of North Carolina student with a millionrecord seller, "A Rose and a Baby Ruth," came to Moscow after four concerts in Prague that drew 28,000 Czech listeners.

He admitted that "I was kind of set to be on trial" as the first U.S. country music singer in the Soviet Union, In fact, he went over so well that there is now talk of including other country musicians in formal cultural exchanges between the United States and the Soviet Union,

After Hamilton finished his first two singing lectures at Moscow State University and the Institute of Foreign Languages here, an older teacher came up and touched his arm. "I know it came from your heart," she told him. "What happened here is the hope of the world."

Monday with one of the brighter stars of the international took set, Gloria Guinness, and be British banker husband, Loci, their villa in Acapulco. That evening they had dinner with the Mexican foreign minister English O. Rabasa, in his house over looking Acapulco Bay.

Italian singer Gigliola Ciaqueli is to sing a song called "Si" (185) at the European song festival in London April 7. But "yes" to a politically controversial word in Italy at the moment—on May 12 1 1 Italians are voting in a referendum c: whether to retain the country's divorce law adopted to reason the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country's divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted to the country divorce law adopted four years ago. Because of the wording of the referendum, a "yes" vote will be against divorce. Italian radio and Ty (RAI) Said in a communique that "although the song Miss Cinquetti will sing contains no element for or againthe referendum, it has a titleyes—which could lead to con-troversial interpretations." This might put in question "the strict impertial position RAI has taken concerning the divorce referen-dum." So Italians will neither see nor hear their entry in the contest.

The Medal of Honor Society will present its patriots avant this year to Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., because he "exemplifies the highest ideals of pair. otism and love of country." Charles A. MacGillivary, president of the society of 301 living recipients of the highest military honor conferred in the United States. said the award will be presented to Thurmond May 4 at the society's annual convention in Co-

Sailor Yoh Aoki of Japan put into a small southeast Australian port last week after a 94-day voyage across the Indian Ocean, Aoki left Osaka aboard his homemade 21-foot ketch Ahodori II in June, 1971. His land. fall at Klama, south of Sydney, came after a non-stop 6,600-mile voyage from South Africa, He has covered a distance of 25,000 miles in his craft, which doesn't have an engine or radio. Acti plans to stay about a month in Australia before leaving for home. SAMUEL JUSTICE
